Babcock enlisted Portacom to provide temporary space to accommodate naval personnel and maintenance crew whilst work was carried out on a naval vessel, located at the Devonport Naval Base, home of the Royal New Zealand Navy. An ablution and pumpout facilities were delivered to the prepped site. Despite multiple relocations, through effective communication and Portacom's willingness to assist the customer to the best ability, facilities were installed within just a few days and ready for use before the naval vessel arrived.

Thanks to Portacom's experienced team and their ability to accommodate changing conditions, the crew were able to begin operations with little delay, ensuring happy customers.
